Canongate and Tolbooth. The Canongate is one of Edinburgh's principal streets, extending from St. Mary's Street to Holyrood. About half-way along its length is the Canongate Tolbooth, which dates from 1591 and is a quaint old building in the French style of architecture, with turrets and a projecting clock. Into its wall is built the pillar of the St. John's Cross, to which prisoners condemned to the pillory were formerly fastened.
